Hannah Brennen on Pomodoro

When you mention Collingwood most people think immediately of skiing in the Blue Mountains. But Collingwood has long been a mecca for many aspiring young horse enthusiasts who respond to the lure of competition at the areas world class equestrian venues.

Such a facility is Stonetree Farm, a sprawling 100 acres with all the amenities a top level boarding/show venue needs. Spacious stalls, large paddocks with sturdy oak fencing, an indoor arena and outdoor sand ring and all the conveniences aspiring riders need to excel are offered at Stonetree.

The facility was created and developed by Lorella Zanchetta and David Brennen. Stonetree Farm provides coaching on many circuits from schooling shows to the A Circuit. During the off season Stonetree can be found showing in South Carolina and Florida.

With horses competing at many levels and riders at various levels of experience a good feeding program is a priority to Lorella and her management team. The farm uses Fit & Fibre, Phase V, All Phase and Flax Appeal. Lorella had this to say about Pomodoro ridden by Hannah Brennen one of the farm's great young riders.

"We found that in Florida, the pony had progressively less energy and a duller coat on a different brand of feed. After returning to our barn in Collingwood in April, the pony's energy level visibly increased, his coat became brighter, dappled and shiny. We noticed a difference in the pony's overall well-being once he was back on a Brooks ration."

More and more top level equestrians and facilities like Stonetree are discovering that Brooks has the variety of feeds and supplements they need to provide manageable energy for competition and balanced nutrients for good health and vitality. Our thanks to Stonetree for their support of Brooks Feeds and young equestrians.
