

Reiners Ridge

Passion & Commitment

Lyndsay Kloster has been living her passion for reining and ranch riding at her Uxbridge area farm (Reiners Ridge) since 2011. In sixteen years of competing in Ontario and the U.S. Lyndsay has had many great accomplishments including competing as part of the FEI young Riders team, twice finishing in the NRHA top ten world standings and competing in the NRHA Futurity in Oklahoma.

In addition to competing, Lyndsay is dedicated to sharing her knowledge with riders of all levels and contributing to the rapid growth of reining in Canada.

The future for Lyndsay includes continuing to learn from the top professional U.S. trainers and progressing through the major shows in Canada and the U.S. while growing her clientele of non-pro riders through coaching, clinics and competing.

Lyndsay also knows the value of good equine nutrition. Even with all the travel and competing “we are able to keep our horses in great condition with ideal bodyweight, healthy coats, good top lines and ample manageable energy.” Over the years Lyndsay has worked with Brooks Clinical Nutritionist Vern Avery to customize diets for her competition horses, boarders, and school horses.

Brooks Equine Nutrition is proud to contribute to the success of equestrians like Lyndsay who love what they do and actively promote their equestrian sport.

*“Warm, welcoming, helpful and professional with a great indoor arena and outdoor sand ring!”
